FROM THE FAR NORTH.

Bishop Clout of the North West (R.C.) mission is in Montreal, and his appearance shows that he has undergone great privations and has aged very considerably under the trials to which he has been subjected in his province, which extends as far north as the Arctic Ocean and covers an area of many hundred square miles under about twenty missionaries. There are about ten thousand Indians in these missions, nearly all of whom have been converted. The Bishop resides at Providence, 40 miles below Great Slave Lake. He went out to the North West in 1857; there was but one diocese then under Bishop Tache. At that time it took a year to go from Montréal to any point past Winnipeg. On his first trip Bishop Clout took 29 days to go from St. Paul to St. Boniface, and a few years after he was made a Bishop, but he was not consecrated to the office for three years as it took that time to gather together a bishop and two priests.
Ever since he has been living among the Indians, his ordinary food being fish and dried meat. This life has shattered his health and he is now under treatment.
It took him three months to reach Winnipeg on his way down. He expects to pass the winter here—Montreal Star.

An auction sale of miscellaneous articles, consisting of furniture, etc., belonging to late Duck, will take place on the 23rd inst., opposite the office of Mr. Newlands, barister.

From Mr. Murdoch, C. E., who was a passenger on board the Princess from Grand Rapids on her last trip it is learned by the Manitoba that a pretty rough time was experienced. There was a hurricane blowing, and the waves ran mountains high. The large cable which was connected with the large in wire snaped off like a piece of thread, and the large and four men on it were cast adrift, but finally it was cast ashore. The Princess lost one anchor, and lay within fifty feet of a rock all one night for shelter, only held by one anchor, which if it had dragged would have resulted in destruction to the vessel and the loss of those on board. A night of terror, it can easily be imagined, was passed, and the coming of dawn was eagerly looked for. Thanks to the seamanship of the captain and crew, and the staunchness of the craft, no accident occurred, and the steamer was brought into port safely.

FRIDAY, OCT. 15, 1886.

A DISCOVERY.

At the last meeting of the Town Council the following motion was moved and carried:

"Moved and seconded by Comrs. Brown and Gifford that a petition be forwarded to the Lieutenant Governor and Council praying them to pass an Ordinance confirming the incorporation of the town of Prince Albert, as doubts may arise as to the legality thereof, and the same to be signed by the Acting Mayor and Clerk on behalf of the Council, and that the draft ordinance on the table be sent with the petition."

To the people of Prince Albert, who have been labouring all along under the impression that the town was founded on a legal basis, this motion came like a thunderbolt, and they were being asked themselves and everybody else how it is that it has taken the Council and the solicitor almost a year to find out that doubts were likely to arise as to the legality of the incorporation of the town.

On referring, however, to the proceedings connected with incorporation we find that everything was done in a legal way. The Lt. Governor was petitioned in the regular way, the proper legal notices were published, the proposal to incorporate was carried on the 22nd of August, 1885, and the election of Mayor and Council took place on the 12th of November following. Where does the illegality come in, then, and why are the people of Prince Albert held up to the gaze of the North West Council like a parcel of ignoramuses by our Council—or three members of it—petitioning that body to legalize what is already legal? But we suppose the Councilors concerned will throw the blame on the town solicitor, an individual who, we are free to admit, is in every way qualified to shoulder it.
That, however, will not free the three Councilors of blame. It is right, of course, that we should have a solicitor, but it would seem to be much better not to have one than to pay for advice rather than without, and he may have been the laughing stock of the people of the town.

It is true there were some irregularities about the assessment, some being assessed higher than others who had no right to be, and the roll not being completed and the rate levied at the specified time, but the Ordinance provides a remedy for all this without appealing to the North West Council. A ratepayer need not pay more taxes than it is right he should pay, and it is in the power of the Council under clause 255 of the Municipalities Ordinance to pass a by-law remitting the balance, and clause 18 of the same ordinance gives power to the first Council to extend or curtail the time within which or at any time it is required to be done by any officer of the Council.

Where were the eyes and brains of the town solicitor that he could not see and understand the sections referred to, and advise the Council accordingly.
He is supposed to be the guide, philosopher and friend of the Council, and through them of the people; but he would seem to be neither. He would seem to have led them either willingly or unknowingly into a quagmire of error for which the people have to pay in cash and consternation.

But the North West Council are not asked to legalize illegal acts on the part of the Council or its officers, but they are asked to legalize the incorporation of the town, which would not legalize an illegal act on the part of the Council or any of its servants, and if the town solicitor does not know this the sooner a change is made the better.

We trust, however, that our representative in the North West Council will have the good sense to lay the blame for this petition on the proper shoulders, and move that it be returned to our Town Council and solicitor with the recommendation that they study the Municipalities Ordinance.

SCRIP.

Instead of the paying out of scrip being about finished it would seem that, if all demands are to be granted, it will take some time yet before the Government has paid the last one. Efforts are now being made to secure scrip for all halfbreed children born in the Northwest since 1870, and even the old whitesettlers have got it into their heads that they are entitled to scrip. But as scrip is being granted in the extinguishment of the Indian title, and a white man is not an Indian, we are at a loss to see how they can make their claim good. There is a possibility that the demands of the half breeds may be granted, but it is reasonable to suppose, indeed very safe to conclude from the greed for scrip, that the Government will be forced very soon to draw a line somewhere.

REPRESENTATION.

The Regina Leader is agitating for Northwest representation in the next session of the House of Commons. We are anxious for representation in the House of Commons as any one, but as the general election occurs next year, we do not think it would be advisable to subject the Northwest to the turmoil of two elections within a year. Besides the expense of running two elections within such a short space of time is more than most men are willing to undergo, and having waited so long we can surely wait another session. As for the Free Press says it is not worth nothing. It is at its old game of trying to make us believe that it will be an act of tyranny on the part of the Government if we are not granted representation in the next session, while at the same time it knows that the Government are pursuing the proper course under the circumstances. It is votes the great hypocritical organ is after.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"If you want to build up a country," says Mr. Chapleau, "build it on love, build it on affection; build it on that loyalty which has not to kneel down to anything."

The Edmonton Bulletin says:—"The Prince Albert Times in a late issue says that when the Government is attacked, we have a right, if we can, to defend it." The point in the saving clause is well taken. "Nothing like a saving clause with a point in it. Our contemporary does not make many points. Generally the opposite."

The Mail says the Government does not intend to invite Parliament to do away with the Northwest liquor law, and establish a license system. The reason is probably because the Dominion with the liquor question after we have acquired responsible government, and present law answers for the purposes for which it was passed. As between prohibition and the license system, while we believe in temperance, and total abstinence, for that matter, we would prefer rather than prohibition should prove a failure, to have a license system adopted with such penalties attached to a breach of it as would guarantee its strict observance.

A Regina Leader correspondent who recently visited Banff, was mistaken for a live loon. This was a clear case of mistaken identity allowing to his having a bald head and being tailed with a wig bosom. Mr. Davin should wear a wig bosom. The genuine cow-boy, despite what may be said to the contrary, has a soft spot in his heart. A party of them recently saved a Winnipeg drummer from a severe attack of standing collar. They collared him and took it from his neck.
Is the opinion of Mr. Murdoch, C.E. who has for the past three months been engaged on the Saskatchewan ascertaining how its navigation can be improved, the river can be made navigable, but at great cost.

BECAUSE "Louise," in the "Tricky Troubadour," is made to say "Her lover's wailing is sweeter music in her ear than the closing paragraph of a Free Press editorial," the editor of that journal grows hostile. But any lover whose wailing is discordant as an F. P. editorial, is, like the latter, not to be trusted.

J. P. WATKINS, of the Montreal Post, has accused Hon. Thomas White of "packing and stealing" from his Department, and been sued for $10,000 damages. When a newspaper accuses a man in Mr. White's position of stealing, it deserves to be made suffer and we hope it will. Apologies are played out.

All the preliminary arrangements have been made for the building of a railway through the beautiful and fertile valley of the Spillmucheau river. This country is the garden of British Columbia, being suited for all kinds of agriculture. The road is to connect with the main line of the C.P.R. at Simnams Junction, 250 miles from Victoria.

As old H. B. C. servant in the Peace River country expresses it as his opinion that it is not fit for agricultural purposes, but the same thing was said of this country years ago, and yet we can raise all most any vegetable or grain raised in the Dominion. Time, and a very short time, will show that the Peace River country is not the frost bound country it is pictured.

From the report of Mr. Hugh J. Montgomery, who was appointed to inspect the crops raised from Government seed grain in this district, we learn that from 1,857 acres sown with wheat the yield was 20,269 bushels; from 1,598 acres sown with oats the yield was 13,514 bushels, and from 1,491 acres sown with barley the yield was 9,724 bushels. The yield per acre, of course, was very low, but that was owing mainly to the dry season. The total yield would have been much larger had it not been for a hailstorm destroying the crops at Carleton, Duck Lake and part of Batoche.

We regret to say that we last week neglected to give Mr. A. H. Clarke, Secretary of the Lakes Agricultural Society, credit for the very creditable way in which he has performed the duties of his office. Only those who have acted in the capacity he has for the last two years know how much trouble and anxiety is connected with the office.
But of Mr. Clarke it must be said—and we do so with pleasure—that to him more than all the other officers put together, was due the success of the exhibition. To him also, more than any one else, was due the procuring of the Merchants' Challenge Stock Cup. He is a worker, and and it is workers we want.

The Scrip Commission got through with their labours at this point last Saturday and left for Batoche on Monday.
One hundred and sixty one applications were made and about $28,000 in scrip issued. More than one-half of the applicants were halfbreeds who have withdrawn from the treaty. Thirty-seven out of the 161 applications have been reserved on account of the residence on the 15th July, 1870, not being in the ceded territory, or for further evidence as to the dates of births or deaths. There are a number of halfbreeds at Cumberland and other places on the Saskatchewan east of here who have not yet received scrip, but who, we presume, will be paid next year.

A MAN FROM GLASGOW.

A Glasgow draper, who was narrating his experience during the first visit to England, said he stepped into an Episcopal church in the middle of the service just to see what they did. "I hadna been well seated," he said, "when the minister, saw at the door, and cried out, 'Lord preserve us all!' and then the folks about me cried, 'Lord preserve us!' 'Preserve us,' said I, 'did ye never see a man frae Glasgow lo!'"

North West Council.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

(Special to the Times.)

REGINA, Oct. 14.

The North West Council was formally opened yesterday by Lieutenant-Governor Hewlitt.

Referring to the crops, His Honor said that of 137 townships heard from 1 find there are 71,951 acres under cultivation, of which 22,714 were sown with wheat; 26,021 with oats, 8,933 with barley, and the balance, 4,282, with roots. Within this area about 14,000 acres of new land have been broken this year. He alluded to the condition of the population, to the construction of railways, to immigration, and to the visit of the delegates to Ottawa, one of the results of their visit being that legislation was passed during the last session of the House of Commons which provides for the establishment of a Supreme Court of the Territories, including a Court of Appeal, involving the appointment of an increased number of judges and officers of the Court. As a consequence legislation has become necessary on the part of the Council, and I have caused bills to be prepared which will be at once submitted for your consideration.

The School Ordinance, which occupied so much of your time during last session has been with very general approval throughout the Territories. On the 1st of January last there were 48 Protestant and 11 Roman Catholic schools established in the Territories, in all 59 schools. To-day there are 76 Protestant and 14 Roman Catholic schools, in all 90, showing an increase of 31 schools. Seventy-six Protestant schools represent a school population of 2,233, and the fourteen Roman Catholic schools 533, or 2,766 pupils in all. In addition five petitions are now pending for the erection of new districts with an estimated population of 140. Municipal matters appear to have worked satisfactorily under your Ordinance of last year, although complications seem to have arisen in the important municipality of Calgary which may necessitate some action on the part of the Council. He referred to the necessity for a re-distribution of districts with a view to giving a more representative character to the Council. He recommended that the Dominion Government be urged to secure a permanent character to the Colonial Exhibition. Alluding to Indian affairs, he said things were never more quiet and recent reports were entirely unfounded. He alluded also to the progress made by the Indians in agriculture and to the beneficial results effected by their visit to the east.

After the Lieut. Governor's speech, Mr. Perley moved, seconded by Mr. Secord, that the address in reply to the speech from the throne be taken into consideration to-day. Messrs. MacLeod, Cayley and Turfitt were appointed a committee to draft an address. Mr. Ross moved for a standing committee for the session of 1886.

The Lieut. Governor submitted an Order in Council enlarging the powers of the Lieut. Governor of the North West Council. The Order-in-Council deals with a variety of subjects, including direct taxation and incorporation of railways and steamboat companies. An Ordinance was submitted respecting administration of Justice, and Stock Companies and their powers, which were read a first time on motion of Judge Rouleau. The second reading will take place to-day. Also an Ordinance respecting Vital Statistics.

ONE OF THE BRAVE 49-ERS.

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

"Rate," said the Doc, "rate—there ain't no rats nowadays like the rats we had in '49. The rate in '49, they were big fellows. These rats don't amount to anything."

"About how big were the rats in '49?" "Well, I should say the average was about nine pounds, but that was common."

"What was the biggest rat you ever saw?"

"Well, there was one rat in Sacramento that weighed fifteen pounds. He'd fought all the terriers in town and killed most of them. That rat went about as big as I liked. Many a time I've seen that rat sit upon the edge of a refuse barrel, put down his foot and pick out what he wanted, and all the terriers in town looking on."

The North British Canadian Investment Company (Limited), of Glasgow, Scotland, have appointed Mr. W. T. Ramsay agent at Calgary. The company lends money upon improved farms at a low rate of interest.

AUTOGRAPHS.

(FROM SAUCY MISS JONES' ALBUM.)

A LITTLE YOUNGER.

To Miss Jones. Did you ever experience the awful thump-Of your heart, as it keeps bumping-bump-Of your breast bone, as if it wanted to be free. Who saw one you could love you happen to see. For this is the way my heart continues to hop. And rather than lose it I'd like with some one to swap.

ANTHONY WHOLLOP.

To which Miss Jones appended. It may whollop way till it breaks all your bones. But you bet your socks you can't Whollop Miss Jones.

DEAR GONE.

To My Dear Miss Jones. If I could only rise like Byron could I would fill the Album—so I would—And tell you of the dearest desire—A something keeps my innards all a-dre—I feel to change your name to one much sweeter. And have you sign it Mrs.

ERSON PATER.

To which Miss Jones added a P. S. Peter's a very nice name, but then I have no doubt. Rather than do as you desire, 'twere best to peter out.

EVIDENTLY A POET.

To Miss Jones. Talk of the dizzy heights to which the mountains climb. Piling the clouds with their snow-capped spires. Talk of eternal and everlasting time. And of the impassible glare of hell fire. These are not as high, nor fast as long. Nor burn with a glare and heat so strong.

AN LOVE.

Talk of the shock of an earthquake—'tis naught. To the way you have on my heart-strings wound. Sweet dove. PAT CODDELL.

Miss Jones' P. S.

Since love is such a fearful thing, Mr. Cod dell its no wonder your are astray in your model. —SQUIBB.

TERRITORIAL NEWS.

The Lethbridge News says:

Mr. C. A. Magrath was busy Monday and yesterday (27th and 28th Sept.) laying out the foundations of the new barracks. We understand that the lumber is being got ready and tenders will be asked for the construction of the buildings in a few days.

Mr. A. J. Scott has been awarded the awarded the contract for the erection of the English church at this place.

Supt. Neal and Major Steel came down from McLeod on Monday last to meet Col. Herchmer, who arrived on the train Sunday evening.

A hog round up is the latest novelty in the stock business. Mr. O. S. Main has a large number of hogs running loose on the prairie at present and has several men at work rounding them up.

The contracts for oats for the North West Mounted Police have been awarded as follows: MacLeod, I. G. Baker & Co., Battleford, Tims, of Swift Current; Regina, Maple Creek, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge to a firm in Winnipeg. The price this year is lower than last.

The Edmonton Bulletin says:

Seven deaths from measles occurred last week among a band of late treaty Indians camped near Fort Saskatchewan. They were formerly members of the Two Hills band. The wet, cold weather of two weeks ago was what did the business. The Indians on all the reserves in this vicinity have the disease among them, and if it has not spent itself before winter there will be slaughter among those who have not had it up to that time. In former years the measles have been as fatal to the Indians as the small-pox if they were attacked in the winter, and comparatively harmless in the summer. If it gets into the north country just at the beginning of the winter there will be a fearful mortality.

A letter was received here on September 14th, from Messrs. Pilon and Moodie, who left here on the 1st of June last to explore the Athabasca for minerals. It was dated at Fort Chipewyan, July 5th, and came by way of Carlton and Qu'Appelle. They had just arrived at Chipewyan the day before and both were in good health and spirits. From the Landing they had no difficulty in reaching the Grand Rapids of the Athabasca, but from there to Fort McMurray, some 60 or 70 miles, the river is almost a line of rapids, giving the explorers a pretty rough time. From Fort McMurray to the lake the river is nearly straight, very wide and full of islands, very easy and pleasant to sail down. Fort Chipewyan is in the west corner of the lake, at its outlet by way of the Slave river. The trip from Edmonton to Chipewyan occupied 34 days. At the date of their letter they were starting for the north end of the lake and had rigged a sail on their boat. All the information they had received up to that time was very favourable and they believed they had already secured specimens of silver. The appearance of the shores of the lake is that of a mineral bearing country. The steamer Grahame arrived at Chipewyan on July 3rd at about 3 p.m., having left Fort McMurray at 1 p.m. on the 2nd. The distance is about 200 miles.

Last fall about this time a report was published in this paper of a demented white man being found up an Indian north of Victoria and brought in to the settlement. Also of his being afterwards seen on the Landing road going north. He then had no weapon but an axe, no clothes but those on his back and no provisions. Where or how he spent the time since is not known, and it was generally supposed that he must have perished during the winter. But on Wednesday last he was seen by R. Jarvis—who saw him on the Landing road last fall—on the Bow river trail in the neighborhood of Peace Hills, going south foot and alone. He had a shoe-pack on one foot and a moccasin on the other, stockings, trousers, coat and cloth cap; no pack or gun. He is a man of middle size and has a full but shortish beard.

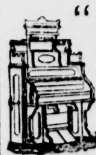

The Calgary Tribune says: Throughout the whole of Alberta the farmers have had a plentiful harvest. Grains and roots alike gave a large yield, of excellent quality. The coming fall show should be exceptionally rich in the displays of farm produce. The grains grown in the immediate vicinity of Calgary have been principally oats and barley. They have yielded magnificently, and wherever wheat has been put in a good crop has usually been obtained. Of course, in the absence of a flour mill, very little wheat has been sown. If next year the farmers make it a point to grow enough wheat to give occupation to a mill, depend on it the mill will be erected.

The Calgary Agricultural Show takes place on the 19th and 20th.

HON. JOS. A. CHAPLEAU ON THE RIEL ISSUE.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau, Secretary of State, has been visiting and speaking in several places in Ontario lately, in company with other leading politicians. At Kingston, South Essex, he spoke for over an hour with his usual force and eloquence. Referring to the cause of his visit, he said he had come to tell Mr. Blake that he was not at liberty to say that his programme should be one thing in Quebec and another in Ontario. He came to tell the Liberals that they could not be disinterested in Quebec and play loyalty in Ontario. He came to tell Mr. Blake that he was responsible for Mr. Laurier raising the Riel cry in the Charnley election. He (Mr. Chapleau) had brought on the election in Charnley to see what the Grits would do. He knew they could not carry the election without they raised the Riel cry, and it was raised and was successful. But Mr. Chapleau did not despair of his province. Referring to Mr. Laurier, he said it was not by carrying the musket on the banks of the St. Lawrence that he would engrave his name on the history of his country. He sympathized with Mr. Laurier in his error—the greatest error of his political life—an error which would always be a stain on his reputation as a statesman.

After referring to the fact that when the rebellion broke out every one in the law was running to go to the North West to fight the rebels, and the very men they were now building up to the gaze of the public as a martyr—the man Mr. Blake thought was honest, and the man the jury thought perfectly sane—the man who was without a friend to speak for him in the House of Commons at the time the rebellion broke out—Mr. Chapleau went on to explain why a certain portion of the population of Quebec was so agitated upon the subject:

"There is no hatred in my heart," said Mr. Chapleau, "I used to say I was too short to hate. I don't like to hate my fellow countrymen. I don't hate them. (Hear, hear.) I showed them their mistake in saying that they had been misled by sympathy for a man whose last days were arriving—by sympathy for a man who was to be no more a human being. Gentlemen, I hope I will not be reproached when I tell this. As Mr. McNeill has told you, and as a singular coincidence, the only other occasion on which I have passed through this country, was when, in 1874, I was going to the North West to defend Lepine, accused of murder. When I was asked to defend that case I did not do as the lawyers did for Riel—though I do not blame them for doing it—I did not have people go into every portion of the country asking for money to be paid for my services in the case. In the morning I received his letter, and I answered him that the next train would see me on my way. I told him that I would refuse any fee, and that I would not accept a single dollar for my service. (Loud applause.) I have acted as one of the friends of the Metis, and as I have stated in the House, I hear repeat: 'How was it that the man who knew me intimately, that Riel to whom I had rendered services, how was it that his friends never thought of writing to me to ask me personally to be the advocate of his cause?' Surely Riel did not doubt of my ability—I doubt of it myself—but if he did he should not have doubted of my good will to go and take up his case, for that I would have done even at the risk of my portfolio in the Cabinet, a thing to which I attach considerable importance, but for the emoluments of which I do not care a penny. (Applause and cheers.) Riel knew that it was not for money I was aiding friends when in need, in danger; still, without doubting my ability nor my good will, they never sent word to me about it. I must say that I sympathized with the unfortunate fate of poor Riel. I will say that I never doubted the loyalty of the sentence; I never doubted the sanity of the man who had been convicted, but I prayed as a mother or as a father would pray, to try and spare the life of a human being; and when I was told that for the good of those territories which were threatened with uprisings, for the example of the poor people whom he had deceived, the sentence should be carried into execution—as I stated in the House of Commons, I did not finish my prayer by a blasphemy. (Hear, hear.) I did not send my entreaties to my colleagues by swearing at them or trying to stab them—I did not do that. I got up and said, 'It is all right, I know that the sentence is all right. (Hear, hear.) When those people said to me, 'If you will abandon your post we will do as much as other people, we will secure all your wants, we will provide for your existence more than if you were a minister of the Crown we will put you at the head, you will be our leader!' I looked and saw that the wave was coming; I saw it coming, I saw it rising like a tornado, and I heard it moaning. I did not go away. I did not yield to their entreaties. I threw myself before the wave that was coming, and I said I would, like a rock, remain there (applause)—let the wave break and crush me, and they would find the remains at the bottom saying that I disapproved of the rebellion. (Loud applause and prolonged cheers.) I was told that if I wished, with the power I had with the people, that magnetic power—and I must say that in my Province of Quebec I had only to present myself and I was always received with the greatest sympathy, and more than sympathy—my friends said, 'With your magnetic power we will make you powerful, and you will be at the head of a powerful army of over a million, as compared to about six or seven hundred thousand in Ontario.' I told them, 'You may banish me from public life, but you will always find in me a lover of justice and a faithful conservator of public law. (Loud applause.) So I have remained, the tornado has passed, and I have not been injured; but perhaps my future in the Province of Quebec has been to a certain extent determined. But at all events the wave is passing and the tornado is receding, and when all has passed away they will find me as strong as I was before. I trust that I shall have both the hearts and minds of my countrymen for me, and I trust that I shall be able to come before you in the near future to compliment my Province upon their reaction, because, as I stated before, the Province of Quebec is not disloyal. And let me say, gentlemen, that it is impossible in the Province of Quebec, as I think it is impossible everywhere else in this Dominion of ours, to ride either the Catholic or the Protestant horse; and I say here, and I say to whoever may hear it and take advice from it, whoever would try to ride the Catholic or Protestant horse in this country would find an obstacle that would break the horse's legs or the rider's neck. (Laughter and applause.) We claim in our Province to have nothing more than equal rights with you. I claim that when Canada was conquered by the gallant British army, that when the battle on the Plains of Abraham was fought, it was won, not to create Protestants out of Catholics or Englishmen out of Frenchmen—it was won to give another star to the British crown, to make Great Britain more glorious and grand. (Loud applause.) I know that it is one of the glories of the British empire, of the British crown, one of the glories of our noble sovereign, whose sceptre is over nations, to allow British subjects in their credulity to worship idols if they like. It is one of the glories of the British Government that in no way have they tried to have men betray their trusted motherly affection or Godly veneration. I say that, French Canadian as I am, I am as devoted a subject of my noble Queen as any other subject in this entire Dominion. (Loud applause.) I have proved it on the occasion which you know, and of which I have spoken; and I say I am not a little better than any other of my fellowmen in the Province of Quebec, unless they have been deluded, and some of them have been. I shall say that in our Province, with my fellowmen, who claim to have equal rights, I disclaim any idea. I disclaim any attempt. I say it would be a perdition to put race against race and creed against creed. If you want to build up a country, build it on love, build it on affection, build it on that loyalty which has not to kneel down for anything. (Loud applause.) Though I am proud to be a British subject, I am proud also of the race from which I sprang, which has helped so much to make Canada, and that some of the same blood which I have in my veins was shed in a battle which resulted beneficially to the country. I must say that I thank God very often that we have had that event in our history, which is a noble privilege of our trust, but gives us greater liberty, and which will make me always in the future a true Canadian in the past, a true subject of His Majesty. (Applause.)

(Who shall say that Mr. Chapleau has not played the wiser part in this comedy of error; who shall say a man animated with such a spirit is not worthy of a place in the hearts and affections of every true Canadian—that he is not worthy to rise, that he will not rise, superior to the difficulties with which he is at present surrounded, and those who seek his political ruin. Clearly no Canadian who loves his country.)
